

Ed Meets Hillary...

Your humble editor waited at the front door of the Wyndham Washington to ask Senator Clinton questions about her view of how energy saving lighting will fit into her energy plan. After several conversations with different secret service agents about where I should stand to best approach Senator Clinton, one agent told me exactly where to go.

Later, a Clinton press person, who arrived before Senator Clinton proposed a deal. If I agreed not to ask any questions, he would tell me where to stand. I agreed and he told me to stand at the bottom of the escalator, which I did.

As I waited for Senator Clinton, I began to wonder if my camera batteries were fresh. They were not.

So I am standing at the bottom of the escalator, with camera, looking like such a tourist.

Clinton: Hello
Ed: Hi, how are you?
Clinton: Fine. (I snapped the picture)

Clinton: Did you get what you wanted?
Ed: Uh, no, it didn't take.
Clinton: Try it again.
Clinton: Oh, I moved, take another one.

Ed: Thank you.
Clinton: You're welcome.

